ters).—Quebec Province's Labor Minister Pierre Laporte was found dead last night in a suburb of Montreal A single built had been fired through his head. The body of the 49-year-old father of two was found in the trunk of the ear in which he had been taken from his home Oct. 10 by members of the Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ).

An PLQ communique announcing the slaying was found, following telephoned tips to radio station CKAC, in a theater in Montreal's Place des Aris, It included a sketch map showing where the car was parked.

The 'communiqué said Mr. Laporte was executed by the FLQ's "Dieppe Cell" followed by the notation "Royal 22nd Regiment." (This was apparently an ironic reference to the bloody defeat suffered by units of the regiment, whose troops now guard Mentreal, at the hands of the Germans in the Dieppe raid of World War II.

[Quebec provincial police issued an all-points bulletin late tonight naming two men wanted for the kidnapping of Jemes Cross and Pierre Laporte. A spokesman said warrants have been issued charging taxi driver Marc Charbonneau, 37, and teacher Paul Rose, 27, with kidnapping in both abduction cases, the Associated Press reported.1

First reports of the finding of the body, wrapped i. blood-scaked blankets in the green Chevrolet, coincided with a rumor that the body of British diplomat James Cross had also

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AF).— Egyptian Foreign Minister Mah-moud Riad denied today that his country had moved new missiles into the Suez Canal buffer zone since thes tart of the Arab-Israeli cease-fire.

What has happened, Mr. Riad said, is that missile sites installed before the Ang. 8 cease-fire frequently have been moved for security reasons and consequently aerial photographs show what looks

Canada in Crisis

Canada's invocation of massive emergency powers against the use of kidnapping as a political method did not prevent the use of murder as a political method. But the escalation of terror and of the mobilization of governmental force against terror carry their own warnings.

A whole generation in the West has grown up with no real knowledge of what repression can be. True, that generation talks of repression, but the strength of public opinion and the limited legal steps taken to curh violent dissent in virtually every Western nation do not constitute repression as an older generation saw it function, or as millions in less favored lands know it today. Freedom to agitate against laws and institutions has been confused, for too many, with freedom to act against them. That there is a point at which organized society must say. quite simply, that it refuses to be disorganized hy splinter groups, history has repeatedly shown. But there are thousands who are too interested in making history to read it-and so must re-enact the tragic errors

That it should be Canada which drives this lesson home-Canada whose formal Bill of Rights is comparatively recent, but whose respect for the liberties of the subject is old. and bred in the bone-only heightens the drama and enforces the moral of tha confrontation between society and those who war against it. Many Canadlans were deeply troubled by the extensive powers assumed hy Prime Minister Trudeau. Some would have preferred more specilic legislation to deal with the terrorists. They will, doubtless, all have their say in today's parliamentary

But unpunished murder, unpunished bombings, unpunished bljackings, are not a Canadlan problem alone. If it is true that the kidnapping and murder in Quebec were intended to produce the polarization between the state and the rebels that has occurred. this is only a step-if a tragic step-beyond that technique used in so many demonstrations: to press just past the boundaries of the legally or practicably permissible. The demonstrations usually involve only the police, or a municipal government; the events in Quebec have brought a nation to crisis.

This may please the genuine rehels. But It certainly should give pause to the many thousands of the young who respond to revolutionary slogans without any real notion of what revolution entails. And it should also trouble those of their elders who have elther encouraged the sloganeering, or talked of "law and order" as if it involved only some compulsory hair-cutting. In that sense, Canada's crisis is the crisis of the Western

Egypt at the Crossroads

The Egyptian electorate, offered no other choice, has confirmed the selection of Anwar Sadat to lead the nation, as one official put it. "in the path of Nasser." That will be no easy mandate, not only because Presidentelect Sadat is a lesser leader, surrounded by ambitious associates of widely differing points of view, but also because nobody can say for sure what path Gamal Abdel Nasser was following at the time of his death.

Mr. Nasser's old confidant Mohammed Hassanein Heykal, the Minister of National Guidance, reports that only a few hours before his fatal heart attack the late president dictated a message to President Nixon reaffirming his willingness to seek peace with Israel on the basis of the United Nations Security Council resolution of Nov. 22, 1967.

But Mr. Heykal also has disclosed that Egypt sent three battalions of Palestinian commandos, plus arms and ammunition, to Jordan last month to help guerrillas who are opposed to any peace settlement in their fight against King Hussein, Nasser's partner in the search for peace. And the guidance nister has quoted his former mentor in terms that indicate cynical disdain for the damage done to peace hopes by Egypt's flagrant violations of the standstill ceasefire, According to Mr. Heykal, Mr. Nasser dismissed the "fuss" the Israelis were making about the missiles as being "without logic." adding that if the missiles had not already been set up in the cease-fire zone it was Egypt's "duty" to do so.

President Nasser may have been sincere in his desire for a peaceful way out of the costly confrontation with Israel, but his actions in Jordan and in the cease-fire zone carried Egypt down an altogether different road toward renewed war. If Nasser's successors want to move toward peace, as they must to advance the domestic economic and social programs that are Nasser's legacy, they will have to pursue peace more consistently than he did.

Egypt cannot attain the peace that it needs unless its leaders begin to honor the commitments they are called upon to make on the way to a settlement. Neither the Soviet Union's diversionary resurrection of old peace proposals nor Egyptian Foreign Minister Riad's unjustified attack on the United States at the United Nations can obscure the fundamental issue of broken faith on the part of both Cairo and Moscow. The harsh line adopted by Mr. Riad in public and by Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko in the first of his private meetings with Secretary Rogers only serves to deepen the atmosphere of distrust that has stalled negotiations.

The world awaits some clear indication from the Egyptians and the Russians that the same footing as commercial they are now prepared to move by deeds as well as words from confrontation to negotlation in the Middle East.

International Opinion

Trudeau's Emergency Action

The invoking of the special War Measures Act by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau is an unprecedented move by a government in peacetime. It was obviously taken with the support of the leaders of the opposition parties in Ottawa, the Quebec government and the administration of the city of Montreal. Canadians across the country who were undoubtedly jolted by the news will generally support Mr. Trudeau's action. We cannot allow a small terrorist group to shelter hehind democratic institutions while attempting to destroy them.

-From the Toronto Tclegram.

The Star would have much preferred to see the Trudeau government justify this drastic step to Parliament before taking It. and to claim only those powers under the act which are absolutely necessary to deal with the Quebec situation. The civil liberiles of Canadians are not to be lightly suspended. In invoking the War Measures Act, the government's position before the volatile public opinion of Quebec is greatly strengthened by the fact that the Bourassa government and the city government of Montreal asked the federal government to do so. But a request by these governments is not, in itself, sufflcient justification.

-From the Toronto Star.

In invoking the War Emergency Act. Mr. Pierre Trudeau has moved Canada's kldnapplng crisis on to a new plane. For ten days he and the Quehec provincial government have played a cool, skillful and determined hand. Mr. Trudeau himself deserves high praise for the stand he has taken right from the start of the affair. Mr. Trudeau accurately diagnosed the issue which lies behind not only the Quebec kidnappings but also those done by the Palestinians and in a number of Latin-American countries. Society has to defend Itself, as he put It. The Quebec Liberation Front is not a genuine political movement. It is a band of terrorists who proclaim their goal to be "world revolution." -From the Doily Telegraph (London).

It is of course a time of anxious concern all around, and for as restrained a use of those powers as the emergency permits. But It is also a time for the public, understandably unaware of the inner dangers and circumstances of the crisis, to restrain its criticism of those powers. It is not yet a police state we are in, but anarchy and terrorism have pressed our state to meet strength with

Mr. Trudeau must tell us, too, why the Canadian government failed to recognize armed revolution in its early stage and thereby to take adequate steps against it. -From the Sudbury (Ont.) Siar.

For the moment the judgment of reasonable people will have to be suspended, and support must be given to the government. When the crisis is over, the Canadlan people will have the right to expect a full accountlng and justification for these extraordinary

Let the Buyer Beware

President Nixon vetoed the bill to limit the amount of money candidates can spend on television advertising, the public prints have been full of gloomy predictions that the fat cats were about to take over the television screens, brainwash the voters and buy up all the seats of power in the Great

Well, it's no joke. Madison Avenue is now the road to the White House. A pleasant smile, a big bankroll and 20 commercials a day look good like a candidate should (what do you want—bad grammar of bad taste?), but there must be some way to protect the public from this political huckstering.

If we are forced by the President to put TV political advertising on edvertising, we could at least adopt some of Sen. Hart's 'truth in advertising" devices.

As in the cigarette ads, for example, there is no reason why the grinning picture of your favorite political scoundrel should not carry the warning, "this candidate may be hazardous to your health. Or perhaps it might be possible to print the dirt or falsehood content in each of his speeches.

The Voter's Credulity

This depends, however, on the assumption that the voters are boobs who can do nothing to combat this political polition, and this is not precisely true. The present system rests on the conviction that the more a voter sees a politician tha more likely be is to vote for him.

There is no reason, however, why the voter should not take precisely the opposite position. Tom Dewey lost the 1948 presidential election partly because somebody said you had to know him well to dislike him. It is a rough rule of thumb, and might lose us a few good weliheeled candidates, but things wouldn't be much worse if you resolved any doubts by voting for the candidate who advertised the

This is not quite as silly as it sounds. Even the officials of the hlg television networks, who are not indifferent to making money. favored the TV advertising bill the President vetoed; and so did a majority of the members of the House and Senate, even many of them who stood to gain by unlimited television advertising.

The reason for this is perfectly political advertising, however, any clear. Increasingly over the last paigning has got beyond the fi-nancial means of all but the very richest of men and forced candidates to solicit funds vastly beyond the legal limits. Thus, for exam-ple, a Republican administration now engaged in a campaign emphasizing the importance of "law and order" is financing that campaign in ways it knows to be unlawful and then vetoes the first-orderly bill on limiting campaign

Universal Trap

The Democrats, of course, are doing the same thing, only not so effectively, but everybody is trap-ped in the corruption of the TV wby not only the hetworks but also the politicians voted to con-

Still, the remedy lies not with the President but with the voters. He can fly around the country and give men like San. Smith of Illineis and Sen. George Murphy of California some "visibility," but he can't give them anything else. The problem therefore is to prove that spectacular political advertising that distorts the political process doesn't pay. They can "self" their candidates, but the voters don't have to buy.

Maybe there will be a new TV campaign bill by the time of the presidential election of 1972, for the Congress is for it, but meanwhile the rule of thumb is worth trying in November: 'Let the voter beware: The candidate you see the most may be hazardous to your health."

CAIRO.—Soviet policy in Egypt has been for cleverer than have been forced to apply methods America's, but It hasn't succeeded as well as it deserves. There is no doubt that without Moscow's eld this country would have disintegrated after its 1967 defeat. Likewise, America is regarded here as a prime example, an adversary. Yet the Russians Egyptians are : certainly aren't loved, nor are the Americans hated.

Instead there is a strange mixture of feelings. The Egyptian people, who are essentially Western-oriented, hlame the United States for almost all their troubles, hut they continue to admire Americans. Conversely, the Egyptians know that the Soviet Union is their greatest friend, but they don't like the Russians. In the first case there is a strange mixture of individual sympathy and political dislike: in the second case the mixture is the opposite. The thousands of Russians here don't circulate much, are mostly housed in their own hillets and deliberately isolated, have little money to spend, are modest in their tastes and are regarded by the extrovert Egyptians as glum, unfriendly, humorless. An official who saw the unemotional Kosygin at Nasser's funeral wonderingly remerked: "To see tears in the eyes of that man was very strange."

Part of the Russians' trouble is that they have been forced into an anomalous situation. They don't want war but must stress They their military assistance. don't like giving weapons to so-cieties of which they disapprove and feel the need to insist on tight control of training with their equipment. To date the Russians haven't tried to penetrate the machinery of Egypt's Arab Socialist Union party. Kosygin made plain that all he new wants is a stable government to succeed Nasser, not necessarily one oriented toward Moscow.

But even with this wise policy of help, tact and minimal inter-ference, the Russians aren't as widely liked or wholly relied upon es one would expect-above all when contrasted to the unpopularity of the pro-Israeli policy of Russia's enemy, the United States.

Nasser, a wily man, never wanted to he left alone in a tete-à-tete with Moscow. He sought help from Russia but good relations with America and thought for a while he had these after Nixon's election. He even told one statesman: "I will never allow a Sovietization of Egypt." He was confident that he was strong enough to risk emsmothering.

Against this background, two basic questions face Cairo's new government. In continuing Nasser's policy, will it seek good American relations as well as Russian to re-equip Egypt. Diplomatically, aid? And, if it fails in this quest, will it be crushed by the bear hug?

The Helsinki Arms Talks

Two-Handed Stud

By Chalmers M. Roberts

strategic arms limitation talks re-sume in Helsinki on Nov. 2. The fate of the many months of talks probably will depend on whether the points involved can be re-

What is involved are (1) American tactical nuclear weapons, numbering about 7,200 by public acknowledgment, stationed in Western Europe, or, more precisely, the tactical aircraft that can drop them on the Soviet Union and (2) tactical aircraft on U.S. Navy carriers which can likewise drop nuclear weapons over the Soviet Union.

When the United States and the Soviet Union had their initial round in Helsinki from Nov. 17 to Dec. 22 last year, the Soviets laid down a dictum on what they consider to be "strategic" weapons in the context of a "negotiation on curbing the strategic armaments race," the agreed Moscow-Washington phraseology. The dictum: Strategic weapons include any American weapons that can reach Soviet soil and any Soviet weap-ons that can reach American soil.

Following this line, the Soviets at Heisinki pushed hard for discussion of American tactical aircraft based in Western Europe and on carriers. The United States response was that the Soviet counterweight to these weapons systems was the 700 medium-range and intermediate-range missiles mostly located in the western Soviet Union and targeted on NATO countries in Western Europe. The Soviets rejected this analysis, saying the missiles mentioned could not reach the United States and therefore were not "strategic." The Americans, knowing that this line of Soviet reasoning went back at least as far as a 1964 Moscow proposal to freeze weapons, reject-began April 16 the issue of whether tactical aircraft, land and carrier-based, should be included under "strategic" weapons was un-resolved. Whatever the reasoning in the Kremlin on this issue, it was obvious that Moscow was as aware as Washington that the West German government would strongly object to any lessening of American nuclear power in Western Europe as long as the 700 Soviet missiles remained untouched. In April at Vienna the Soviet Union orally presented what it called 'basic provisions' of what it would like in an arms agreement. This included the tactical aircraft. But it did not include what the United States wanted most-a limitation on the growing number of the massive Soviet SS-9 intercontinental missiles. Nonetheless, the Soviet proposal was closa enough to the American hopes to produce a June reassess-ment after the chief U.S. negotiator, Gerard C. Smith, and some top aides flew back to Washington. Accordingly, on July 24 the United States put forward at Vlenna its 'basic provisions."

The American proposal added strategic bombers to the category of weapons to come under the "strategic" limitation but it did not incinde the tactical aircraft. Thus when the Vienna talks ended on Aug. 14 the two sides were at least, as the saying goes, within the same ball park. Each agreed to put a numerical limitation on ICBMs plus submarine missiles plus bombers, and on anti-missile systems, or prohibit them alto-

At the moment both the Americans-and the Soviets, having had a vacation, are now drifting back to their desks to prepare for Round Three in Helsinki, expected to last from Nov. 2 to early or mid-December.

Currently, the Soviet position is being explained with heavy emphasis on those tactical nuclear weapons in Western Europe and on American aircraft carriers. A more formal Soviet proposal expected in Helsinki reportedly will include those "strategic" weapons

It also is being explained that any ABM anti-missile agreement would call for limiting such systems to protection of the command and control centers in the two national capitals rather than going to what is known as "zero ABM." In this respect much is made of the fact that the United States

Io receot years, crises have arisen between Washington and Moscow when one superpower felt the other was trampling on a vital interest. The Americans, for example, reacted angrily to the Soviet move to put strategic missiles into Cuba in 1962; the Soviets were eroused by the etart of American bombing against North Vietnam in 1965: Washington displayed a cold response to the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968.

Nothing so menacing or dramatic as an eyeball-to-eyeball confrootatioo over Cuba has occurred this fall. But lesser events have produced a crisic of coofidence and left American-Soviet relatioos in a more prickly state than at any time since the Nixon edministration took

Next, and perhaps more jarring to the White House, came the Syriao intervention in the Jordanian civil war, Although lower officials were skeptical of actual Soviet connivance, the White House took the Syrian intervention as evidence that the old opportunism of Soviet power politics had come to the fore.

At that point, the United States decided to make an issue over what the White House saw as disturbing information that the Soviets might he constructing a base for nuclear-armed submarines at Clenfuegos, Cuba. The White House viewed this with "the most seriousness," pointedly recalling the Kennedy-Khrushchev understanding of 1962 that Moscow would not implant offensive strategic weapons on Cuban soil. The White House was worried that the Soviets seemed willing to seize narrow tactical advantages along the Suez Canal, or in Jordan, or in Cuba, at the risk of jeopardizing the larger interest of maintaining candid relations with Washingtoo in the pursuit of broader settlemeots.

This put a premium on not only the substance but also the atmosphere of Mr. Rogers's talks with Mr. Gromyko. Their four-hour session Friday night gave the United States no encouragement, eased none of the administration's doubt about Soviet intentions. Mr. Rogers made no headway in seeking sccord with the Soviets on the Middle East and Berlin; privately as well as publicly they spurned Mr. Nixon's Indochina peace initiative and rejected American charges of their involvement in cease-fire violations along the Sues Canal Nothing occurred to revive the flagging spirit of détente.

Energetic, Far-Reaching Campaign

Nixon Takes to the Husting

By Robert M. Semple Jr. WASHINGTON.—Between Mr.

Nesser (who died) and Mr. Agnew (who remains very much alive), Richard Nixon hasn't heen getting many headlines recently. But yesterday the second half of the Republican party's one-two political punch embarked on a whirlwind tour of four states in an effort to lend his prestige to his party's efforts to pick up a few seats in the House and Senate in the coming Congressional elections.

A couple of months ago in St. Louis he allowed as how he wouldn't he doing much campaigning. But no one believed him then and rightly so, for yesterday's tour of Vermont. New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin was merely openers for what promises to be one of the most ambifious political ef-forts by any President since Andrew Johnson first toured the country in support of his reconstructioo policies a century

Before his four-state sweep yesterday Mr. Nixon had already paid visits to Georgia and Coonecticus. Tomorrow and Tues-day he is scheduled to touch down in Ohio, North Dakota, Tennessee and Indiana. He may hit as many as a dozen more states before he is through. Visits to Texas, Minnesota and Diinois were added to the schedule Friday. And it will surprise no one if oo election day San Clemente's premier citizen casts his vote in California for his old and emhattled friend, George Murphy. The business of government, in short, has temporarily taken a back seat and the White House press secretary, Ron Ziegler, has dropped the pretense that these are non-political swings. Much to his credit, he has announced that the taxpayers will be reimbursed for that part of the Presi-dent's travel that can legitimately be called political; namely, most of it.

In terms of technique Mr. Nixon has so far revealed noth-ing new. In both Georgia and Connecticut last week, for example, he posed before cameras with local candidates, rode through crowds, tossed out a few lines for the local press, managed wherever he went to neuide a few ethnic reference but spoke only in the most general terms about national issues except to repeat his piedge polished on his recent European trip to usher in a "generation of peace."

No Innovation

Mr. Nixon'e involvement in this campaign is hardly a recent phenomenon. He is simply making himself more visible. Since last spring he has been quietly masterminding GOP strategy, selecting candidates, supervising the construction of a White Honse political management team and keeping a close eye on the adventures of his Vice-President, Mr. Agnew. He has reviewed Mr. Agnew's campaign schedule in some detail and selected the main themes of his

Until last week, however, Mr. Nixon remained aloof from the turmoil of the campaign trail. This too, was part of the strategy-which calls for Mr. Agnew to soften up the opposition by finding those issues best calculated to put the Democrats on the defensive, while the President played the statesman in Europe and otherwise rationed the resources of his incomparable position until the appropriete moment,

From all accounts, Mr. Agnew has done his work well, despite lapses in taste and style that could prove counterproductive. Not only has he dominated the front pages and added a host of weird alliterations to the English language, but he has somehow managed to persuade a good part of the public that the Democrats are responsible for inflation, crime and campus

The remarkable thing about this is that the party in power is usually on the defensive in midterm elections, not the other way around. Murray M. Chotiner, who now dispenses political advice from the East Wing of the White House, should be celing proud. It was Mr. Chotiner who first sold Richard Nixon on the idea, back in the 1940s, that most people cast their vote against something rather than for something, and that the successful politician weaknesses of his opponent'e position while exposing very

Mr. Nixoo's decision to surface now is not without risk. It is by no means certain, for example, that Mr. Agnew's, efforts will have made a measurable difference by Nov. 3. Early hopes that the Repub-licans could seize control of the Senate and greatly narrow the gap in the House have faded. Many key races are now rated as toss-nps. Accordingly, Mr. Nixon has placed his formidable reputation as a political soothsayer squarely on the line.

Why therefore is he doing it. and can he make a difference? There is some suspicion here that he believes a statesmanlike swing by the President a necessary antidote, at this stage, to the savage attacks of the Vice-President-in short soothing crocodile tears for Mr. Agnew's victims. But the real answer to the first question is probably supplied by the second: be is doing it because he believes it can make a difference,

Key Races

His congressional strategists have told him repeatedly that he does not need numerical control of the Senate to regain the legislative initiative. What he needs are three or four key seats. It would be useful, ac-cordingly, to get rid of Senators Albert Gore of Tennessee and Vance Hartke of Indiana—hence the visits to those two sta Equally useful to save stalw like Senators Winston Prout Vermont and Murphy of a ifornia from what could be ; defeats and to help ease office new senatorial faces

ALE HELL COME IN

OFTAWA (NYT).—In the two centuries since New France became first the British colony of Canada, after the Battle of the Plains of Abraham at Quebec city, and then eventually became an independent nation English and Frenchspeaking Canadians have lived generally at peace.

There have been times of friction, but most of the French felt they shared in the government of their country, even if they might feel less at home in provinces other than Quebec because of their language. At the same time, down through the years, there has persisted a trequently vocal minority which demanded independence for a-French Quebec state.

The size of this group grew, especially during the two World. Wars, when the French vigorously opposed conscription to fight a "British" war.

In the early 1950s, after political methods seemed to have failed some of the more extreme French nationalists, who demanded a Quebec separate from the rest of Canada, turned to terrorists tactics. Favorite targets for terrorist bombs were mail boxes bearing the royal coat of arms. The statue of the victor of Quebec, James Wolfe, was dynamited too.

De Gaulle Intervenes

In 1967, as Canada marked is 100th year of independence from Britain, the cause of separatism was given a spectacular. boost when French President de Gaulle from the balcony of Montreal City Hall cried to a massive crowd: "Vive le Quebec-

But since then, although tha bombings and the rhetoric have continued, most Canadians felt their troubles were on the way to solution. Their hopes centered on the person of Pierre Elliott Trudean who in 1968 had become the federal Prime Minister. Mr. Trudeau seemed the ideal Canadian: He was of mixeo French and Scottish descent: he was eloquent in both lan-guages; his personal flamborance and wit were political novelties in good, gray Canada

Then, eleven days ago, the most militant of all the separatists, the Front for the Liberation of Quebec, launched a new tactic. They kidnapped British diplomat James Cross and later Quebec cabinet minister. Pierre Laporte since found

Heart of the Conflict Is the 'Two Solitudes'

The typical English Montreal

MONTREAL (NYT).-Hugh da's best known writers, called his 1945 novel about the English and the French in Quebec "Two Solitudes." Twenty-five years later, Mr. MacLennan's portrait of two separate cultural communities coexisting uneasily remains essentially true.

The events of the last fort-night—two political kidnap-pings by the left-wing Front for the Liberation of Quebec. the refusal of its ransom terms by federal and provincial governments, and joint federal provincial action to ontlaw the front and their arrests of several hundred active membersare not likely to bring the two solitudes closer together.

It is true that in some ways, mostly work ways, the lives of the French and English in Quebec are more intertwined now than in 1945. The drift from countryside to city, Que-"quiet 'revolution" and a tide of French Canadian nationalism have raised French Canadian educational attainment levels, aspirations, incomes, social status and self-

Two Communities

Essentially though, in the way they look at the world and in their private lives, the English and the French remain dis-tinct communities.

Nearly all Montreal residents disapproved of the kidnappings and supported the authorities' refusal to meet the front's central ransom condition-the release of 23 prisoners. Yet among French Canadians there was a current of sympathy for the front. Ten prominent French journalists and labor leaders recommended the release of the prisoners, if only, one supposes, to avert the police crackdown

A young accountant at a lunch counter, when asked what he thought the government should do, expressed concern for the hostages. It turned out that he disapproved of the kidneppings and recognized the risk in submitting to such blackmail but was quite sympathetic to the front's manifesto, a catalogue of Marxist slogans and French Canadian grievances.

Quebec's separatists, or seces-sionist movement, spring mainly from urban soll, and the presence of federal troops in Montreal and Quebec_ City inevitably increase tension.

One-Sixth English

The English account for about one-sixth of Quebec's population of 6 million, with roughly 750,000 of them living in Montreal, a metropolis of 2.2 million. The English, a royal commission has found, earn more than do the French and hold a disproportionetely large number of middle and high salaried jobs.

Reporters and everyone else watched Mr. Trudeau—the man who, growing up in Montreal as a student teacher and lawyer, was considered something of a bleeding heart, himseif. He wanted change, and be wanted it fast, in the archaic political system of Premier Duplessis.

Bnt when Pierre Trudeau went federalist by running for a seat in Parliament in 1965 and began rising to power as an es-tablishment Liberal he was no longer the darling of the Quebec senters, who had grown impatient with "democratic poli-tics." When Mr. Trudeau shortly after becoming Prime Minister in June, 1968, found himself the target of flying bottles and sep-aratists' epithets ("Trudeau au poleau," "Trudeau to the gallows") he and the separatists at least the disorderly among them-knew they were irreconcilable foes,

Last week when Mr. Trudeau had to decide wbether to try saving the lives of the two hostages or to protect the whole society (Montreal police had learned that the FLQ planned to follow the kidnappings with a program of "selected assas-sination") he unhesitatingly chose the second alternative.

The Prime Minister was tough from the start. He counseled Quebec's Premier, the young and able but inexperienced Robert Bourassa, to open up a direct contact with the kidnappers, not to negotiate and compromise, but to make clear the hard line of the two governments (in Quebec and Ottawa) involved.

When this was done, Mr. Trudeau in a succession of telephone conversations steadled Mr. Bourassa's hand, pressing sible" demands as the release of 23 jailed persons, called "political prisoners" by the kidnappers and "bandits" by Mr.

Under Pressure

Thursday, Mr. Bourassa and his cabinet, nnder severe pressure to do something to obtain the hostages' release, announced a readiness to free five of the "political prisoners," or "bandits," in exchange for the safe return of Messrs, Cross and Laporte. The Quebec government gave the kidnappers until 3 a.m. Friday to answer.

Meanwhile, the Quebec Premier conferred by telephone with Mr. Trudeau, and a formal request to the federal government for broader police powers was decided on.

Mr. Trudeau and his cabinet were ready to invoke these powers, dormant for 25 years. the minute Mr. Bourassa's 3 a.m. deadline arrived. The proclamation and accompanying regulations specifying the new police powers went into effect at 4 a.m. At 5 a.m. reporters, called from their beds to the parliamentary press gallery, were informed by Romeo Leblanc, Mr. Trducau's press secretary, that police in Quebec, certainly in Montreal, were already making raids and arrests-without benefit of warrants—under their expanded au-

How Safe Is Marijuana?

Series of Tests Raises Some Serious Questions

By Lawrence K. Altman

NEW YORK (NYT).-Marijuana is one of the o'dest and most widely used drugs known to man. Yet scientists know less about its safety than they do about many newer drugs. Last week, at a hearing of a committee that is evaluating New York state marijuana. laws, a pharmacologist reported findings from his experiments on animals that raise serious questions about the safety of marijuana. What his experiments on pregnant mice and rats mean for humans is not entirely clear. But other recent reports in medical journals indicate that some physicians are becoming incrasingly concerned about the possible adverse eifects of marijuans in man. Dr. Vincent dePaul Lynch told the New York committee that pregnant rats that breathed marijuana smoke at the equivalent of one cigarette a day for 10 days in his laboratory at St. John's University here, had produced offspring with serious genetic defects. Dr. Lynco, whose field is toxic and adverse reactions of drugs on the brain, said in an interview that about 20 percent of the mice whose mothers had smoked marijuana during their pregnancy were born with cleft palates and defective jaws. This congenital damage, he said, was not limited to smoking during any specific period of preg-

Two Generations

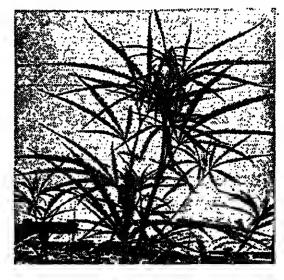

More disturbing to Dr. Lynch was the appearance of the same defects in the next two generations after the damaged mice were mated. This finding implicated genetic damage though Dr. Lynch did not test for defects in chromosomes, tha bundles of hereditary information. His experiments wera controlled. That is, he exposed an equal number of mice to a similar amount of smoke from timothy hay, not marijuana, to rule out the possibility that smoke alone caused the defects. None of these control mice, he said, developed defects.

Dr. Lynch said that he undertook these experiments at the urging of Henry Giordano, former associate director of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs. When he beard Dr. Lynch report abnormalities in mice resulting from mescaline, Mr. Giordano suggested that Dr. Lynch try the same experiment with marijuana. "I thought marijuana studies would be a waste of time," said Dr. Lynch, who succumbed to his scientific curiosity, however, which was based on information that researchers in Georgia and tha British West Indies had reported in medical journal articles after injecting marijuana into other small animals.

"These results are ominous enough to suggest that women be specifically cautioned to avoid marijuana during pregnancy," Dr. Richard G. Pillard wrote in a recent issue of the New England Journal of Medicine in commenting on these previous studies.

Dr. Lynch considered inhalation of smoke a more realistic experiment than feeding or injecting marijuana into animals. In his experiments, Dr. Lynch noted that mother mice destroyed some of their offspring at birth. When he examined these mice, he found that they had cleft palates and defective jaws.

Dr. Lynch said that he had given a brief report of his findings to a combined National Institute of Health and National Science Foundation meeting earlier this year.

A drug's effects-rood or bad on animals may not hold true for man. Drugs of proven benefit to man, such as penicillin, insulin and cortisone, can cause birth defects in animals. Determining marijuana's effects on pregnant humans would require experiments that Dr. Lynch, among other scientists, considers im-practical and unethical. Such studies would require pregnant women to purposely smoke measured amounts of marijuana-and nothing else-over a specified time to see if their babies were born defective. The better part of a century would pass before the effects on future generations could determined.

Psychotic Reactions

What concerns Dr. Lynch and other doctors are reports of psychotic reactions among marijuana smokers, though no one has proved that there is a cause and effects.

Twelve American soldiers had acute psychotic reactions after using marijuana in Vietnam, Dr. John A. Talbott and Dr. James W. Teague reported last year in the Journal of the American Medical Association. Many more soldiers are believed to have experienced such reactions because one-third of American troops reportedly smoke marijuana in Vietnam where, these doctors reported, marijuana is cheap, readily available and disguised in regular American cigarette packs. Other doctors in this country and elsewhere have also reported psychotic reactions in civil-

As the popularity of marijuana has increased, doctors reports have hinted at adverse reactions such as bronchitis. In a letter to the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Milton M. Waldman of the Bronx reported e patient who smoked five to six mari-juana cigarettes a day for a few years and who developed "a marked bronchitis," that is, an inflammation of the wind-

'Lost' Effects

Dr. Waldman pointed out that the possible adverse effects of marijuana smoking on the lungs, including cancer, have "been lost in the argu-ments about the behavioral and psychological effects of the Recreational use of drugs such as marijuana has always been part of society. Not all users, obviously, are harmed by marijuana and doctors do not know which users are adversely affected or how often reactions occur. Of course, no one has ever said that inhalation of smoke is beneficial. Man smoked cigarettes for centuries before scientists accumulated evidence of tobacco's harm. Now numerous studies attest to the fact that cigarette smoke can lead not only to various lung diseases, including cancer, but also heart ail-

Some doctors wonder whether marijuana smoking might do the same thing. But answers to such questions require more animal and then human experiments, money and time. Meanwhile, the debate over penalties for those using marijuana will continue.

Price Weakness More Pronounced: 'Ultimate Buvers' Prove Elusive

By Condon Bakstansky

PARIS. Oct. 18.—Weakness in the straight dollar and deutsch mark Eurobond sectors became more pronounced last week, and the one convertible on offer was said to be running into difficulties,

Virtually all receent flotations were trading at discounts—sometimes two to three point. below issue price-and volume

No new dollar issues were actually announced, though Security Pacific National Bank said it would be coming out with up to $25 million in five-year notes, probably early next month.

On the DM side, managers of Queensland Alumina's 100-million-DM, 15-year issue with a planned coupon of 81.'2 percent dropped the anticipated pricing to 97 from the 9812 range, and the offering period was extended to Oct. 19 from Oct. 15.

Right behind it are Burmah Oil, with a 50-million-DM, 81/2-percent, 15-year issue to be priced Oct. 21 and a 50-million-DM, 15-year, 81/2-percent issue from the Long Term Credit Bank of Japan with lists opening Oct. 30.

Under Pressure

The convertible under pressure is the $20 million, 15-year offer from Mitsubishi Shojl Kaisha, expected to carry B 71/2percent coupon and due to be priced this week, Several problems have been mentioned in connection with this one, none of them apparently affecting the judgment of the company itself. For one, it seems to have become fashionable to be a bit leery of the Japanese conomy as that nation settles into a less phenomenal growth pattern. For another, the planned Mitsubishi coupon is a half point below that of its immediate predecessor on the Eurobond market, Holiday Inns.

Perhaps its largest handicap, however, has been the track record of Toshibs, which floated a 81/2-percent convertible ear-lier this year before a sag in the Tokyo stock exchange. The bonds are now quoted at 821/2 bld, 833/4 asked.

Where one fashion fades on this market, however, another soon pops up. The latest is the reappearance of Euroguilders. IBM Overseas Finance NV. of-fered 80 million of 8-percent, five-year notes at 993.4—the same terms as the recent Amsterdam-Rotterdam Bank issue. Asked how long it took for the IBM issue to be sold out, a market observer said, "Oh, maybe 20 minutes." As interest in nondollar issues has built in the past few months, the attraction of both DMs and guilders has run high. Both nations have a queue system limiting the amount of issues allowed in their currences, and one problem for the DM merket was that the West Germans apparently lifted the queue requirement for a month thus the mass of new issues and weakness in the secondary market. The Dutch, if anything, seem to have clamped down harder as their currency became more popular.

As prices sagged by up to a point last week, there was in-

Earnings Reports, GM Strike, Corn Blight Giving Wary Tone to U.S. Financial Markets

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (NYT). -A web of caution spread over the financial markets last week as investor concern heightened over the economy, the federal budget, inflation and the gener-

Wall Street found little to cheer about in the background news and nothing to validate the rising optimism that had permeated the markets in August and September. balance, both markets showed some of its inherent strength. The financial community was paying greater attention than it should have to past economic statistics and the third-quarter corporate financial statements, most of which have admittedly been rather pallid. The current scene and the outlook into early 1971 are considerably better than the available distorted data suggest.

Rise in GNP

Take the current state of the economy. Even though industrial production fell 1.7 percent in September, two-thirds of which resulted from the automotive shutdown starting on Sept. 15, the nation's gross product for the third quarter grew by a fairly impressive $14 billion to an annual rate above $985 billion.

The letest quarter's real growth after allowing for in-flation was 1.4 percent—no reason for hallelujahs, of coursebut it could have been 25 per-cent if half of the country's automotive production had not

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (NYT).—The majority of issues on the American Stock Exchange and on the Over-the-Counter market continued to decline last week in quiet trading Most price changes averaged about a point, although some issues responding to special situations had larger moves.

The poor performance of the market was reflected in the exchanges price index which finished on Friday at 22.59, down 0.24. Turnover slumped to 13,711,790 shares from 22,716,675 shares in the preceding week.

One of the best gainers for the week on the Amex was Valle's Steak House, which advanced 6 3/8 to 19 3.4 on a turn-over of 141,900 shares. On Monday, Campbell Soup Co. an-nounced it had agreed in principle to acquire Valle's for $38,-925,000 in cash.

Volume leader for the week was Canadian Homestead, which fell 1 1/8 to 6 7/8 on a turnover of 270,400 shares. The weakness in the counter market was pinpointed in the National Quotation Bureau's index of 35 industrial issues, which fell 5.25 points to end the week at 345.09.

Among the larger losers in the counter market were the Cincinatti Enquirer and Electronic Data Systems, which each

N.Y. Financial Markets Take On a Cautious Tone

(Continued from Page 16) would be in store rather than a deficit if the economy were at full employment, with a 4 percent or less jobless instead of the present 5 1/2 percent. Actually, B deficit of $15 billion or so in a trillion-dollar economy will not have a serious impact. Of course, it will impose further strains in the financial realm as the Treasury finances it and pushes other borrowers out of the marketplace. It will, however, provide a stimulative effect for an economy running well below capacity (now at 78 percent), cushion hardships of relatively high unemployment and serve social needs and problems. The other problems that were confronting the financial mar-kets last week were worries over inflation and the early pattern of third-quarter corporate profits. Despite the discouraging recent indication that wholesale prices rose by only onehalf of 1 percent in September after more moderate increases earlier in the third quarter, the fact is that the rate of increase in prices, wages and costs is declining and will continue to ease further in the months ahead. Nevertheless, many businessmen continue to be imbued with inflationary expectations

The same hesitancy that af-flicted the stock market last week prevailed just as pervasively in the money and capital markets, where investors and traders were trying to fathom the economy, Federal Reserve policy, the fate of President Nixon's Vietnam peace initiative, the unending parade of long-term financing and such things as the corn blight.

The uncertain course of those varied factors caused the bond market to move nervously and indecisively.

On the one hand, evidence of sluggishness in economic conditions tended to push interest rates lower, hut, on the other, the apparently tightening monetary policy of the Fed and the big volume of new bond offer-mgs acted to hudge rates up-The corn blight, which seems likely to drive poultry and pork prices significantly higher over the next year, could disrupt the progress made so far in fighting inflation. Consequently, the crop disease, which has cut production about 9 percent, may be a real influence on the credit markets, keeping interest rates Perhaps more baffling than any other factor was the recent indication that the Fed has been slowing the growth in money and credit from the rapid expansionary bias that characterized its actions last summer in the wake of the Penn Central bankruptcy. The preliminary estimate for

September shows B slight de-cline in the money supply, ingoal of 5 percent for the third quarter probably was not reach-

The first batch of statements from major companies in a cross-section of industries was anything but inspiring. When the figures come in the next two weeks from the leading automotive, steel, chemical, forest-products and conglomerate companies, the profit picture for the July-September quarter very likely will show a further deterioriation from the drop of the two previous quarters this year.

Zapata had wanted to be sure that B high percentage of the bonds would be tendered before going ahead. Large investors apparently posed relatively few problems. But the Europond market is still based on anonymous individuals, most with small accounts.

Several observers outside the Zepata plan have noticed its passing with regret. "It would have meant activity, and Lord knows that's what this market needs," said one.

Another pointed out that the reoffer—$700 bonds for $1,000 bonds, but with the same yield, plus B change in warrants to bring them in line with the present stock price—signaled a South opened two clubs, a strong artificial forcing bid, and received a negative response of two diamonds. He showed his heart suit, and North showed moderate strength by bidding three clubs.

South showed support for bis partner's presumed club suit, and continued to slam, rather optimistically, when his partner gave a preference to hearts. Sout b's optimism balanced North's conservatism, and the result was a reasonable slam, There were 11 top tricks and fair chances of making a 12th.

The declarer was eventually able to develop an endplay against West when the cinbs failed to break favorably. He won the opening lead of the diamond king with the ace and immediately led out all his trumps.

West had to find five discards, which was not easy. He parted with one spade and all his diamonds, guided by his partner's play of the diamond jack on the first trick. But this

INTER ICE AGE 4

By Kodo Abe. Translated from the Japanese by E. Saunders. Drawings by Machi Abe. Knopf 228 pp. § SOME PARTS IN THE SINGLE LIFE

> By Jimmy Miller. Knopf. 242 pp. $5.95. THE DECEIVERS

By Joanna Barnes. Arbor House. 312 pp. $6.95:-. Reviewed by John Leonard

KOBO ABE seems never to rewrite himself, to worry an old rone. Each new novel translated into English, exploiting and discarding fictional forms like clutches of Kleenex, comes as a surprise and a provo-cation. "The Woman in the Dunes" (1964) was a shooting script for Hiro Teshigahara... "The Ruined Map" (1969) was a metaphysical detective story. "Inter Ice Age 4" is science fic-tion, complete with computers predicting the future, submarine colonies and the usual apocalyse.

This time, the apocalypse con-sists of volcanic eruptions on the ocean floor and melting polar ics cans. The rising water level seems likely to wipe out terrestrial life. Scientists set about secretly to force an evolutionary mutation. Beginning with mice dogs, pigs and cows. they arrest and alter fetal development to equip the creatures with water-breathing fish gills. Man is the next step. By paying mothers who want abortions, the scientists acquire a sufficient number of 3-week-old human fetuses to start an underwater breeding farm. Come high tide, the "aquans" will take over. Mr. Abé's revelations arrive in plausible clusters, as they are perceived by Professor Katsumi of the Institute for Computer Technique, and as Katsumi reveals himself to the reader. Katsumi has built a forecasting machine, capable of predicting economic and political eventual-ities. The machine is also capable of reconstituting an individual personality and predicting its death day. (Mr. Abe is more convincing on mutacons than he is on computers.) To prove bis machine's capaci-ties, Katsumi investigates a murder, only to discover the aquan plot and to find that he is personally involved. . :

Such a scheme gives Mr. Abe the opportunity to meditate on fundamental questions—the na-ture of free will, the cruelty of the future, qualities being converted into quantities for machine reassembly into different qualities—and to imagine a wholly alien world. The best parts of "Inter Ice Age 4" deal with aquan culture (underwater communication, transportation, music, "land sickness," etc.; and the breeding farm (that menipulation of the human materials that geneticists like gargantuan equanimity). As science fiction unfortunately, the book doesn't measure up to the high standards established by Frank Herbert in "Dune": and as straight fiction it doesn't measure up to the high standards established by Mr. Abe in "The Ruined Map." __ Jimmy Miller's second novel squanders too much time on half a dozen single women, of unexceptional intelligence, playing musical beds in Manha Two-thirds of "Some Part the Single Life" are derote mate - stealing, mate - swap one-night stands, the same tunes on the same old og and smart talk. Cross was momentarily stunned by the blind-side hit. but regained his balance and fell forward over the goal. The fan ran back into the stands and was last seen being escorted away by a troop of police officers.

Plunkett passed for two touchdowns and ran for another as he racked op 220 yards in the first half. Tales of the Cellar

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.—It was nime to teach the children about the democratic way. Sniveling and sneering, they were herded into the cellar where the television is kept. When Denny—he is seven—saw the electronic aalesman being activated, he sniveled Bnd sneered twice "Why do we have to watch television?"

Denny sniveled. There's nothing on but a lot of political Baker bums running for office. We don't want to see political bums. We want to go upstairs and read Charles Dickens, Moira nine, sald

Denny spoke the truth.

"Shut up and watch or I'll hit you with the shove!! —The explanation prescribed for such situations by Doctor Spognew's indispensable "Antipermissive Baby and Child Care"—silenced them in a thrice.

They were told in no uncertain terms that they were the heirs to a preclous democratic system and that it could only be preserved if the youth of Americs understood how it worked. We were there to learn about democracy at work. By this time the tube was warm. It introduced a commercial for Sweeney, who is running for Congress. It showed a skinny girl with thick eye glasses. Her hair was falling out. She weut to a dence, and everybody laughed at her.

"Why not wise up. sis?" an astoundingly lascivious young woman, who had taken the skinny girl with the bad hair behind a convenient potted palm, asked her a few seconds later. "Do like me. Vote for Sweeney."

Seconds later, having cast her ballot for Sweeney, the skinny girl had gained 27 pounds in the right places, sprouted a magnificent growth of natural blonde halr, improved her vision to 20-20 and agreed to marry a rich Apollo and have fun ever after. 'Is Sweeney a new bair spray?" asked Moirs.

"No. dear. Sweeney is a man, and he is running for Congress, and everybody who votes for him will cease being ugly and will marry beautifully and live a life of total fun." Then one of the commercials for Topsawyer began. Topsawyer is running for the Senate. HIs commercial began with ter-rifying films of crime in the street. Of war. Of surly post-adolescents holding insolently long hair in both hands and shaking it at the camera. Then we saw a woman in a kitchen. She was wan and gray. Her blood was very poor and she had a headache. She could not get her sink white, and her floor had no sparkle.

In a synthetic cloud a man appeared. He looked ineffectual and slightly drunk and was accompanied by a dog to show that he was a great human being. 'Land's sake!" said the wrecked woman "What's that?"

Topsawyer," said the commercial. 'One vote for Topsawver makes the world like new. Watch!" A finger pulled a lever marked "Topsawyer." The kitchen instantly became a new place. The dreary housewife was dressed for a ball. All of her old blood had been replaced by lively new blood, and her husband had been made a vicepresident and had become 15 years younger. There was peace in Asia and a marvelous new shine on the kitchen floor.

Topsawyer gives you liveller blood, less hair, more peace. whiter sinks, shinler floors and husbands with more eex appeal said the commercial. "And." added the renovated housewife. "twice as much haircutting power, too,"

After the Topsawyer commercial came a station break. "Golly," said Denny, "are you trying to get us to see that deniocracy is a system under which any American boy can become congressman, or senator, or even President if he's got several million dollars to buy advertising time on television? "No, silly," said Mours, 'he's trying to show us that it's just as dumb to believe politicians as it is to believe businessmen." They were exaspersting, the little devils. The thing was to make them watch more commercials. There was O'Toole for mayor because he got breath sweeter, Ambljanian for Congress if you wanted brighter laundry, Elsinore for Senate for a faster-starting engine on winter mornings; Ambidexter faster relief and twics as much pleasure, and so on.

Denny at the last saw the point, "Daddy," he said, "is trying to teach us that democracy is a system in which nobody at election time thinks it worthwhile to discuss govern-

for governor if you wanted

At that they were released from the tedium of the television set and allowed to go back to their Dickens.

Jeffrey Ross Stewart (1952-1970)

By Ann Blackman

HOPEWELL JUNGTION, N.Y. (AP). Barefoot and clutching wild flowers, Jeff Stewart's friends came to bury him. child of a drug generation, oon of a Methodist minister.

For days, weeks, even a year before he died, some of these same teen-agers had come to Jeff, not with wild flowers, but to share marijuana, heroin, barbiturates Jeffrey Ross Stewart, 17, a star baseball player, died of an overdose of barblturates in a clubhouse he helped build on Candy Lane.

The tragedy in the Hudson Valley village, population 300, and a picture of small town America, may well reflect what is happening in communities all across the United States.

Jeff's parents knew their son had B drug problem, but they didn't know how to cope with lt—and the extent to which he was involved surpassed their wildest

The last year of Jeff's life was a time of ocep torment for his parents. He became very thin, couldn't sleep Bt night Bnd had little interest in anything. Like thousands of other parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Harold Stewart agonized over their inability to understand why their child turned to drugs.

The Stewarts' Story

Reached in a small cabin where they'd gone to rest, the Stewarts agreed to talk about their son's life and death in hopes that it would convey a message to other young people whose fascination with drugs baffles them.

"Yes, we knew he was taking drugs, but we didn't know what to do," the Rev. Stewart sald. "Last summer he was in a hospital's psychiatric unit, but they discharged him after a week. That was after he tooks LSD." Ann Stewart, a small, grey-haired woman, broke in to say: "On the way home from the hospital, he said he wished he were a little boy again so he could start life over. He told me he wished he'd never started taking drugs. The problem is he wanted to stop, but he thought he could do it himself. We tried to get him into Dutchess County Health Center, but he wouldn't go"

Hopewell Junction is a comfortable country hamlet with no slums, no serious unemployment problem and not even its own police force, None of the village youths has died in Vietnam,

The Stewarts said their son was a handsome boy, about 6 feet 1—if only he didn't have that long hair. They said hs was sbout a B student 'when he wanted to study," interested in music

"We used to ask him why he took drugs and the only answer we ever got was. 'I like them." Mr. Stewart sald, Jeff was the youngest of five children. Two sisters are married, one with three children, the other with two. His two brothers live at home.

Being the youngest, he had more material things than the other children," Mrs. Stewart sald. "Goodness knows we're not rich, but we like to make our children happy. Last Christmas we bought

On the way home from the hospital, he said he wished he were a little boy again so he could start life over.'

Jeff a $350 bass guitar because we knew he wanted one. He loved to play it."

Most of Jeff friends said they, too. experiment with drugs. Some said they smoke" (marijuana) and "drop acid"

(LSD) regularly, One of Jeff's friends explained why he likes drugs: "You see people who aren't there, and they're colored, man, like pink, lavender and lime-and you're talking to them, like me and you are talking and your imagination is working overtime-doing flip-flops—now don't that beat sitting here on the curb looking at the fire hydrant?'

Asked why he started taking drugs, the youth said, "There's not much else to do in Hopewell."

Most of the town residents agree there's no place in Hopewell Junction for young people to gather and little for them to do. There's no movie, no bowling alley, no discotheque and no teen center.

Yet not all adult residents here ars sympathetic with the teen-agere' com-plaint of boredom, "This notion of having no place to go-when I was a kid, we had to ride three miles on a bicycle just to find someone to play with and we managed to keep our noses clean," said the mother of one boy who takes drugs.

Jeff didn't have a summer job, but it seems he got money and drugs from numerous sources, Several friends admit they gave him money-$10 to $20 at a

Last June, Jeff hocked his guitar for $25 to buy heroin. His brother said, "He really must have needed it bad because he loved that guitar."

One of Jeff's closest friends explained. how the young people in Hopewell Junc-tion share drugs: "Finding money for drugs isn't a problem. You gotta understand. We have like an alliance. My stuff was his stuff and his was mine. Me, like maybe I spend 25 or 50 bucks a month for drugs, but I share it, and the others, they share theirs with me. If I go to a party and I got some grass, like it's not just mine: It's everybody's, The same boy said most of his friends spend about $25 a month to purchase drugs, "depending on whether or not you're working." Few of Jeff's friends are convinced they should stop "doing drugs" themselves. They won't expose the pushers because they say it would be "disloyal"-to whom, they're not sure.

"Besides, it would cut off our supply."

a 16-year-old said, "Just because he couldn't handle it doesn't mean I can't." The one place many teen-agers in Hopewell Junction used to gather was a small plasterboard clubhouse they built a year or so ago. And it was here, amid the handpainted peace signs and a pile of old clothes, that Jeff Stewart died. On Saturday night, Aug. 22, Jeff and a friend went to the clubhouse, apparent-are reported to have stopped by. They found Jeff stretched out on the floor, dead, his buddy asleep beside him. Some time in late morning the boys went to their homes. An anonymous telely planning to share some "downers." The next morning at about 9:30, two youths phone call alerted a rescue squad. Three teen-agers were arrested a short time later on charges of failure to report a death and conspiring to conceal the body." The woman who owned the property on which the clubhouse was built was arrested on a charge of 'maintaining a public nuisance."

A detective said the youth who had taken drugs the night before with Jeff was found wandering around the clubhouse, unaware his friend had died. He was arrested on a charge of public in-

Guidance counselors at John Jay High School, which serves 1,700 students from surrounding towns, estimate at least 40 percent of the students smoke marijuana. They say they are sure more have tried it out of curlosity and that there is a definite group which uses hard drugs.
"I feel so helpless," said a mother whose son takes drugs. "I see no answer." The mother, an attracive woman in her mid-40s, said she has no use for her child's friends.

She continued: 'I'm sorry, call me square, but I associate long hair with drugs. I like the clean-cut look. This is selfish generation. All they want to do is take, take, take and never give in return."

Since Jeff died, the clubhouse has been knocked down "so nothing else will hap-

Most of Jeff's friends agreed they had little communication with their parents.

A 17-year-old boy said, "T suppose I'd like them to understand me a little better, but there's a barrier on both sides. don't listen to them, they don't listen to me." "What does Jeff's death mean to me? Well, some kids will probably stop dropping flippies for a while. I mean, you gotto watch that stuff and know what you're getting so you don't take some with too much rat poison in it."

The two gray-thatched octogenarians met a line of 450 guests amid sprays of baby roses and daises.
